

A reader questions how councils handle missing pets.

can be obtained from children. There is no greater responsibility for parents than to protect the innocence of our kids.

It's deeply telling that none of the supporters of Sue Knight have offered their own children to Bill Henson. Why not?

Council out of line

SUMMING up the case of a bashing at a St Kilda nightclub, the judge said the reliance of young people on alcohol for entertainment and stimulation had reached "insidious proportions" (ABC News, September 18).

The proposed Triangle development includes licensed venues for 3000 people.

The (Port Phillip) council's PR efforts to sell it focus on cultural aspects, ignoring the profit reliance on huge numbers of people consuming alcohol.

The accentuate the positive, eliminate the negative homily indicates the council is concerned about the way the proposal has shaped up.

Obviously the council has lost control of the proposed development.

The council is out of line with the community and, it would seem, a legal overview on this issue.

Having pre-selected the developer's interests over the community's, the council now congratulates itself on implementing "best practice methods of reducing alcohol-related harm" on the new site (council supplementary report, September 22).

Non-sensical.
